Warns On Loss Of Children

Unless 54,000 Jewish refugee children in Europe are transferred to Palestine they will become an international social problem in two years, Mrs. Waitstill Hastings Sharp, of Boston, Mass., declared. She reported on a two-month trip to Europe and Palestine to survey problems of Jewish child refugees for Hadassah, Women's Zionist Organization of America.

Speaking first before Hadassah's midwinter conference of the national board in the Hotel Park Central and then at a New York chapter meeting in the Hotel Biltmore, Mrs. Sharp asserted that "if we wait two more years these children will disappear."

The speaker had served with the Unitarian Service Committee, the United States Committee for the Care of European Children and the President's War Relief Control Board. She was a Congressional candidate in Massachusetts in the last election.

Mrs. Sharp predicted that the child refugees would be "absorbed into that underground of sub-social life which is being created in Europe by political wrangling, economic bankruptcy and continued anti-Semitism" and would be "lost to the democratic world for which we all fought so bitterly."

Young Jews in Europe waiting to get to Palestine "represent some of the best social material available," according to Mrs. Sharp. She described Jewish children resettled through the Youth Aliyah movement for immigration sponsored by Hadassah.

Mrs. Siegfried Kramarsky, national youth refugee chairman of Hadassah, reported to the national meeting that $210,000 had been [illegible] and educa[illegible] Europe.

Seeks U.S. Entry For DP Orphans

Legislation to permit the immigration of displaced orphans into the United States for adoption was introduced in the Senate and House by Senator Irving M. Ives and Representative Jacob K. Javits, Republicans, of New York.

"This is not an immigration bill, but an expression of the great heart of the United States which always goes out to children," Senator Ives said. "The bill provides that children under 14 years of age who are orphans by reason of the death of their parents as a result of World War II may be admitted outside the quota if they are to be adopted, reared and educated by citizens of the United States sponsoring their admission".

The number involved would not be large, Mr. Ives said, as the backlog of orphans seeking to come there from the American zone in Germany was only a little over 3,200. The number would be reduced further, he added, by the requirement that they actually be adopted by those sponsoring their entry.

Representative Javits endorsed what Mr. Ives had said, and added:

"This bill is also a tribute to the enormous effort already undertaken by great organizations in the United States for the care of Europe's children. It is important to note that this bill does not treat children as friendly or enemy, or on the basis of religion or race, but embraces all children who are the victims of the war's holocaust."

Veterans See Villages Founded

Several American Jews who served in the American forces during the war were among the pioneers who founded a new communal settlement in Upper Galilee.

The group also included South African Jews who fought in their country's Sixth Armored Division and Rhodesians who served in the British army. A second village was established on the Plain of Sharon, north of Tel Aviv.

During their wartime campaigning these South Africans formed a group with the ultimate purpose of becoming communal farmers in Palestine. They met as often as they could and came to Jerusalem on furlough to do farm chores. They used their savings as an initial settlement fund.

A few months after their discharge, the first five of a group of thirty returned to began training at Kfar Giladi, in northwestern Palestine. The others joined them later. American and Palestinian veterans became associated with [illegible]

[illegible] and Syrian frontiers and has 200 acres leased in perpetuity from the Jewish National Fund. The expenses of founding the settlement will be borne by the Palestine Foundation Fund. Both these funds are constituents of the United Palestine Appeal in America—affiliated with the United Jewish Appeal—from which they derive more than three-fifths of their annual income.

Maayan Baruch is named for the late Bernard Gordon, of Johannesburg, formerly vice-president of the South African Zionist Federation, who left half his large estate to the National Fund.

The second village, Yakum (He Shall Rise), was founded by members of the Hashomer Hatzair (Young Guard Movement). A collective, it has men, women and children. Its founders came to Jerusalem as youth immigrants from Germany and were trained locally for farming. A number of new immigrants from Holland and Bulgaria joined them recently.

They will engage in fruit-growing, dairy-farming, poultry-raising and deep-sea fishing. Their village is about one mile from the shore.

Group To Issue Own DP Passports

The Hebrew Committee of National Liberation, with headquarters at 2315 Massachusetts Avenue, N. W., Washington, announced that it plans to issue thousands of passports as identity and travel certificates to Jewish displaced persons in Germany and Austria in the next few months.

The passports will be similar to those carried by passengers on the ship Ben Hecht, which was seized by the British off the coast of Palestine.

The committee, which said that it had registered with the Department of Justice as representing "the interests of the Hebrew Nation", declared that the passports were designed to give national status to displaced persons. All who apply are required to sign a declaration of allegiance to "the Hebrew Nation," the committee said.

The American League for a Free Palestine, 22 West Forty-fifth Street, said that seizure of the Ben Hecht had resulted in many additional volunteers offering their services to help in repatriating Jews to Palestine. The League also announced it had retained legal counsel in Haifa to represent the Ben Hecht and her American crew.

Police Poster Describes Terrorists

The average terrorist leader in Palestine is a lower middle-class man about 31 years old, probably of Polish origin, who previously worked at a skilled occupation. But for his political convictions and activities, he would probably be an ordinary man working at an ordinary job and living on an ordinary street in the all-Jewish city of Tel Aviv.

This composite picture of the leadership of the Irgun Zvai Leumi and the Stern gang was obtained from a broadsheet issued by the Palestine police, offering unspecified rewards for information leading to the arrest of eighteen wanted men. By alphabetical coincidence, the first picture and description in the series were those of Menahem Beigin. The leader of the Irgun appears as a thin-faced, sallow man with large brown eyes and enormous horn-rimmed spectacles, "age 38, height 5 feet 10, build, thin; nose long and hooked; flat-footed, bad teeth; occupation, clerk."

The next to the last man on the list is Nathan Friedman Yellin, Abraham Stern's successor as leader of the Stern gang. He is bigger and tougher than Beigin, a former Polish army clerk. His official description is: "Age 33, height 176 centimeters, build strong, complexion fresh, hair fair, eyes blue, nose normal; peculiarities two upper teeth missing, wears spectacles; nationality Polish; occupation, surveyor."

The last man is Itzhak Yezernitsky, treasurer of the gang. He was captured last summer in the army's combing of Tel Aviv and subsequently broke out of an internment camp for terrorists in Eritrea. "Uses fagotes as rabbi," [illegible] Among the remainder are a Bulgarian, a Russian, a Czechoslovak, a Palestinian, a Latvian and a Hungarian. Their ages run from 24 to 44 and average slightly more than 31.

They include four clerks, two newspaper men, two diamond workers, two laborers, a lawyer, a bookkeeper, a former student, a building contractor, a locksmith, a farm laborer, a painter and a surveyor. The posters carrying their photographs are printed in English, Hebrew and Arabic and will be displayed throughout the country as part of the Government's campaign to encourage further help from the public in apprehending terrorists.

"Information may be given at any time to any police officer or to any police station," the poster says.

Asks Hearing On Rights Of Survivors

The World Jewish Congress has demanded a formal hearing by the Council of Foreign Ministers at which to press for reparations and peace-treaty provisions reinstating the rights of Jewish survivors in Germany.

Dr. Maurice L. Perlzweig, head of the Congress's political department, told a press conference at Washington that a series of recommendations had been sent to the governments of the United States, the Soviet Union, Great Britain and France.

"We accuse the democratic world," he said, "of complete and tragic failure to deal with the Jewish situation in Europe." He added that there could be "no defense for refusal to hear the representatives of Hitler's principal victims."

The Jewish organization proposed that the peace treaty with Germany include these provisions:

In the preamble there should be a statement by the German government admitting the guilt of the Nazi regime and the German people in seeking to destroy European Jewry.

Nazi anti-Jewish legislation should be declared null and void, judicial decisions based on it made contestable in German courts and the way opened to claims for compensation.

Germany should be obliged to enact legislation making it a crim-

Immigration Would Help Canada, U.S., Report Shows

Immigration into the United States has been paralleled in the past by increased employment rather than less and by a higher rather than lower standard of living, the National Committee on Immigration Policy asserted in a report on the economic aspects of the subject.

Characterizing these points as particularly important because of current proposals to liberalize the quota system, the report said:

"Fears among Americans that immigration tends to displace native-born workers from their jobs and to create unemployment are not supported by scientific analysis. Immigrants have not only as workers increased the labor supply in this country but have as consumers increased the demand for goods and thus the total number of workers needed."

The report marked the completion of the first of a series of studies outlined by the committee after its formation in 1945. A second study, in preparation, will deal with the relationship between immigration and population.

The effect of immigration on population is of particular moment, the present report said, in view of the theory that unemployment may as often result from underpopulation as from overpopulation, with its supposed surplus of workers.

"The economic problems of Australia and Canada, for example, are believed to be rooted chiefly in the sparsity of their population," the report said.

Both these countries, the report continued, have shown signs of liberalizing previously rigorous immigration restrictions. Even Great Britain, it was suggested, may face the need of considering immigration to offset conditions making for a static or declining population.

The report said:

"The United States, according to present statistical analyses, is entering upon a period of declining growth of population and may face a relatively static stage of population increase in the present century. American prosperity has in the past always been linked with an expanding population and it is not at all certain that our economic future would be bright if our growth should slow down or stop altogether."

Earl G. Harrison heads the committee as chairman. Honorary vice-chairmen were listed in the report as Dr. Emory G. Bogardus, Albert D. Lasker, Mrs. Henry Goddard Leach, Mrs. Herbert H. Lehman, Donald W. Nelson, James G. Patton, Dr. George N. Shuster and the Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker.

The study was prepared by Professor Henry Miller, assistant director of the Social Research Laboratory of City College, in New York; and Dr. Carolyn Zeleny, research assistant of the committee, and was edited by Dr. William S. Bernard, executive director of the committee.

MARRIAGES

SELTZER-BECKENSTEIN

The marriage of Fay, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Beckenstein, 4541 Esplanade Avenue, to Meyer Seltzer, son of Mrs. Eva Seltzer, of Brooklyn, N.Y., and the late A. Seltzer, took place at Chevra Kadisha Synagogue, on March 8, at half-past seven o'clock, Dr. C. N. Denburg, Rabbi, officiating, assisted by Cantor A. Matts and Rabbi M. Wachtfogel. Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white satin, fashioned with a net yoke, trimmed with seed pearl beads; and long pointed sleeves, fitted bodice, and a full skirt, ending in a two-and-a-half yard-long train. Her finger-tip-length veil, edged with scalloped embroidery, fell from a crown studded with rhinestones and seed pearl beads, and she carried a bouquet of Calla lilies. Miss Lenore Newman, cousin of the groom, of New York, was maid of honor, in an aquamarine-blue gown, with maroon-colored velveteen trimming, and fashioned with a fitted bodice, and a full skirt, and a Juliette cap trimmed with gold sequins. Her flowers were American Beauty roses. Isadore I. Beckenstein, brother of the bride, was best man. The hall was decorated with ferns and bouquets of variegated flowers. "Because" was sung by a choir. EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS

"Isn't it good to see how well young Henry is getting along," I said to his uncle. "Yes, it is a great satisfaction. He served as his father did and now, since he came back, he has taken hold and I believe he is making more progress than any young fellow in town. He is a lot like his father was, full of ambition with a knack of sizing things up and profiting from the experience of others."

"I've been glad, too, to see that in him. He has half a dozen of the best men in town interested in him. He gets their good advice. He was wise when he consulted a trained man and took out the life insurance he needs. It's the foundation of his future."

"The officials of life insurance companies are like the men who advise Henry. They are leaders who know how to invest wisely in progress."

Something OR Nothing

Remember the story of the monkey who tried to withdraw a fistful of nuts through the narrow neck of a jar? [redacted] he ended up by getting nothing instead of something.

That story is worth remembering today. Greedy grabbing of goods still in short supply can have the same result— nothing instead of something. Inflated prices, like the inflated paw of the monkey, can as surely prevent each of us from getting his fair share of available goods.

Canadians have had the wisdom to be content with a moderate "something," knowing that as production increases that "something" will grow larger and larger. This is good sense, and is founded on the principle that MODERATION is the key to CONTINUED ENJOYMENT, a principle to which the House of Seagram has always subscribed.

Jewish Attitudes Toward Intolerance

By S. Andhil Fineberg, Director Of The Community Service Department, American Jewish Committee

"We recommend that all pastors and leaders, as well as all Jewish and Christian communicants, be encouraged to think honestly and speak openly of the things that tend to unite us. The problem of race and creed is not a one-way street; both sides must cultivate good will and mutual forebearance." Thus spoke the Protestants, Catholics and Jews who form the Religious Relations Committee of Washington, D.C., in a recent report.

The problem of race and creed operates on a two-way street. Certainly. Those who live on opposite sides of the street must cooperate or else conditions cannot improve. But prestige and social advantage are on the majority's side. In America white native-born Christians inevitably wield an authority by which others can be excluded or be invited to share the thoroughfare.

Jews, along with other minorities, dwell between the Scylla and Charybdis of being told that they are clannish if they fail to mingle freely with the majority group or that they are "pushing" if they seek companionship outside of their co-religionists. The process of rapprochement and accommodation is not the same for the prestige group and for those who face the danger of rebuff. Wholesome relationships flourish only when both parties understand each other's psychological hazards.

No Jew alive today will ever be able to banish from memory the fact that rampant anti-Semitism slew with unspeakable barbarity 6,000,000 European Jews, more than two-thirds of the entire European Jewish population. If only for numerical reasons there has never been and never can be a Jewish Hitler. "If," says the Talmud, "the iron falls on the pitcher, woe to the pitcher. If the pitcher f a l l s on the iron, woe to the pitcher." Jews are differently regarded, since their ethical standards are lower. Jews see no reason to urge Christians to become Jews, except where intermarriage is involved, since they believe that while Jews should remain faithful to the religion of their ancestors, Christians are equally assured of divine grace. Jews are very proud that Jesus was a Jew.

Appreciation of Christianity and friendliness toward Christians does not function to equal extent among all Jews. Like all other human beings, all Jews resent intolerance when it is directed against members of their own groupings. Distaste of being victimized by prejudice is a universal characteristic. Some Jews are blind, however, as are some non-Jews, to the wicked folly of racial and religious prejudice when its obvious prey is someone other than themselves or their confreres. There is a direct responsibility resting upon Jewish leadership to eliminate the cancer of bigotry from Jewish hearts. "What are they doing about it?" is a fair question.

Young Men's and Young Women's Hebrew Associations have made their buildings increasingly available to non-Jews in the neighborhood. That is a gain on both sides. Recently the New York Section of the National Council of Jewish Women gave one of its edifices in the East Bronx outright to a Negro organization. There are frequent instances of Christian and of Jewish congregations lending their quarters to a neighboring synagogue or church when fire or needed repairs have made a congregation temporarily homeless. These acts of mutual kindness do more to eliminate bigotry on both sides than can be accomplished by preaching. People learn by doing.

Hence among the most useful things done by Jewish leadership [illegible] that will lead to its emulating the pitcher. In other words, the Jews, constituting less than four percent of the American populace, inevitably will be more worried about the attitude of non-Jews toward them than non-Jews need be troubled about prejudice of Jews toward them.

The word "non-Jews" is used advisedly. Jews are well aware that anyone who practices Christianity in his daily living and who abides by Christian precepts is a good neighbor to everyone. According to Judaism, every genuine Christian is assured divine salvation as fully as are those of the Jewish faith. That is why Jews have no missionaries and have never attempted proselytizing since the Christian era began. Idolators [illegible] part the Red Cross, the Community Chest, the Boy Scout Councils and the like, with genuine zeal. Here Jewish leadership has a splendid record of consistently advocating Jewish participation in the work of civic organizations.

Special projects to promote good will toward Christians are many, although the efforts are rather scattered and there is no one overall pattern. Courses on Christianity in Jewish institutions are not as frequent as might be desired, except in rabbinical seminaries, where Christian lecturers often appear. There was a splendid series in Baltimore arranged by a Jewish communal organization in which Catholic, Lutheran, Baptist, Episcopalian and other spokesmen described the doctrines and observances of their own groups to Jewish audiences. Books on Christianity by Christian authorities will be found on the book-shelves of most rabbis, as well as in the libraries of many synagogues and Jewish centers, especially of the Reform group.

There is a natural tendency to favor books which describe Judaism as well as Christianity, such as "One God", by Florence Mary Fitch. This particular book has a great vogue at present among Jews. Posters based upon it are now being displayed in Jewish institutions. Visits by people of Jewish schools to Christian churches are usually arranged with return visits by Christian pupils to the synagogue. These would be more frequent if more priests and ministers offered invitations. Similarly, Union Thanksgiving Day services find rabbis willing to participate, but here again Jews hesitate to take the initiative. Programs by combined choirs of churches and synagogues have been held in many cities across the country.

In regard to exchanging pulpits with Christian ministers, there are ultra-Orthodox rabbis who will let none but members of their own faith occupy the pulpit. They take the same attitude as do Catholics and Fundamentalists but they are in the minority. On the two-way street where Jews and Christians should meet and become acquainted with each other's traditions, beliefs and aspirations, Jews, as a rule, are willing to participate heartily. They sometimes fear, however, that over-eagerness on their part in such enterprises as round-tables of the National Conference of Christians and Jews may create an undesirable impression. Where the instruction must be given to their own people, much of the effort goes to pleading the cause of the Negro and to abolishing prejudice and [illegible] of the colored races in America.

Ardent as many American Jews are to create a haven, or even a commonwealth, for the Jewish victims of oppression, there are among the five million Jews in the United States less than a thousand who want to live anywhere but there. Their hope and their stake for the future of their children and of their children's children is among Christian Americans. This certainly attests the fact that they want prejudice on neither side of the street. Intolerance in any shape or form is a menace to everyone. It would be difficult to find any Jewish leader who does not recognize that truth.

Reunited In New York

A ten-year-old girl was reunited in New York with the older girl who comforted and sustained her through five months of terror in a German concentration camp. The girl was Ilse Stelzer, whose parents died in German concentration camps and who, herself, passed the last five months of the war in another. She has been living in Newark since June 24 with her sister, Marianne, three, and her grandfather, Ernst Stelzer, eighty, in the home of her aunt, Mrs. Alice Wells, of 192 Chadwick Avenue.

The reunion between Ilse and her benefactor, Miss Leonore Schweiser, nineteen, was at the home of Ilse's maternal grandmother, Mrs. Jacob Stein, 428 Ft. Washington Avenue.

Miss Schweiser and Ilse first met on a bitter winter day in 1945, packed with forty-eight others on a freight car bound for the Theresiendstadt concentration camp, near Prague. Ilse's father, then her mother, had been put in camps, and then she was taken. Little Marianne was left with her grandfather. Throughout the months of horror in the camp, Miss Schweiser took care of the smaller girl. They were liberated in May, 1945.

Miss Schweiser arrived with her brother, Benno, seventeen. They and their parents and a brother, who will follow later, will live with a relative in California.

Friedrich Siegert, sixty-six, and his wife Leah, sixty-one, both of Dresden, suffered eight members of their family killed by the Nazis,

The Underground Or Resistance Movement In Palestine

Excerpt From The Report To The President Of The United States And To The Political Actions Committee For Palestine, Inc.

By Joseph Clark Baldwin, Administrative Chairman Of The Committee

The so-called Underground or Resistance Movement in Palestine has been variously described as "a small band of sincere patriots," "a misguided group of die-hards," "a handful of bandits and assassins who feel that the current unrest gives them license to do anything," and "a collection of aliens who are only interested in power for themselves," to mention a few of the terms applied. None of these things are true. The Underground Movement in Palestine, in its several groupings, consists directly or indirectly of the majority of the people in Palestine; and that, perforce, includes the Arabs. It should not be inferred from this statement that all Palestinians are actually members of one or the other of these "resistance" groups, but it is a fact that the mass of the population support these Underground activities in their various categories.

Theoretically, there are three resistance or underground movements, although one is quite open in its purposes and in most of its activities and actually embraces in its membership the members of the other two. The first and parent organization is the Haganah. It was originally founded as a sort of "Homeguard" for protection against the inevitable hazards of pioneering, such as pillage and robbery, but more recently has been active in promoting so-called "illegal" Jewish immigration. Once only has it allegedly resorted to violence, and that was in blowing up the bridge across the River Jordan as symbolic of Jewish disapproval of the Mandatory in dividing Palestine into two separate states. Practically every Jew in [illegible] under the leadership of David Raziel, split from the Haganah in order to take a more positive part in the creation of the Jewish homeland, and which currently destroys military installations, but avoids bloodshed, wherever possible. Its membership consists of approximately 20,000 able-bodied young Jewish men and women definitely organized along military lines.

The third is the F.F.I. (Fighters for Freedom of Israel), more popularly known as the "Stern" group, because of the name of its founder, Abraham Stern, who led a group of zealots in a break from the Irgun, because the latter swore allegiance to the British during the recent war. It frankly believes in bloodshed and assassination as the only way to bring the current situation forcibly home, not only to the Mandatory Power but to the world at large. It consists of about 2000 young Jewish fanatics. Incidentally, the founder, Stern, is no longer alive. He was killed in 1941 when his home was entered by a British Captain and Lieutenant and two British soldiers, and one of the officers, firing into a closet where he was hiding, killed him.

As the author of this report has mentioned before and now repeats, it is his most earnest conviction that these three movements, separately and collectively, are widely supported by the population, both Jewish and Arab, and that they are slowly but surely forcing the British Military in Palestine out of the position of a friendly force and into the position of an enemy occupying Army; at least in the public mind. There can be no other explanation of the failure of the British to apprehend any of either the instigators or actual perpetrators of current acts of violence. Likewise, it is well known that the so-called robberies of institutions to obtain funds are collusive and only items heavily insured are taken.

The Committee's representatives spent the better part of an afternoon with Menahem Beigen, the head of one of these organizations, the Irgun Zvai Leumi. Although he has two "stand-ins", who apparently so resemble him as to be indistinguishable one from another and either from him, subsequent events have proven beyond peradventure of a doubt that Menahem Beigen was the man interviewed. He is a saintly looking, calm, and extremely soft-spoken man with an evident distaste for bloodshed. The portrait of a zealot, there is no question that he is a sincere patriot.

The author of this report, who has expressed himself both publicly and privately as opposed to violence in the current situation in Palestine, went to this conference in some trepidation, but came out, if not in approval of the Movement, certainly impressed by the sincerity of its motives and the motives of its leader. The circumstances leading up to this interview were themselves so dramatic and significant of the present Palestine picture as to warrant a brief review in this report.

Having personally no contact with the Underground except through the local press, this medium was successfully employed for publicizing the desire for a rendezvous. Breakfasting in his hotel room one morning, the Committee's representative was called on the telephone by a young woman:

"I will see you."

"Who is this talking?"

"You will not know."

On the realization that this might be the sought-for Underground contact, the young woman was directed to come to the room.

It was only then that the thought of possible personal violence occurred. After all, a dead congressman might be a surer way of [illegible] about. Fortunately the flowers were promptly followed by a young girl of sixteen or seventeen, literally a "bobby-soxer."

"You will see my chief!"

"Who is your Chief?"

"The head of the Irgun."

"Yes, I would like very much to see him."

"Then you will be in the lobby at 2.30 this afternoon. You will ask no questions. You will be gone six hours."

The mysterious young messenger departed.

The 2.30 P.M. rendezvous in the hotel was kept; but it must be confessed that the precautionary measure of asking the American Consul General to organize searching parties after 9.30 p.m. was taken.

A closed car with two drivers and the "bobby-soxer" as escort constituted the personnel for the initial part of the trip, which was completed after dark on foot, and after three safe stops and three changes of cars and of escort, none of whom, except the last, apparently had any idea of whom they were escorting, and where he was going.

The actual conference was held in a bed-room with Commander Beigen ostensibly ill in bed, a ruse, it was later learned, to prevent any estimate of his height, just as the beard he wore was apparently donned to prevent any knowledge of his actual features.

During the conferences, two of the leader's lieutenants were presented. They were stalwart, clean-cut young men, with splendid bearing and very real dignity, who stood at attention and saluted smartly.

When it was pointed out to Commander Beigen that the violent tactics of his organization were jeopardizing current political negotiations, he replied that any such negotiations were obviously an indirect result of the bombing of the King David Hotel, which startled the world into a realization that something was wrong in Palestine. He added that the Jews would rather be killed in some sort of military action than to die a slow mental and physical death in concentration camps. Incidentally, he said that the author of this report and Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver were the only two foreign representatives he had ever received.

Politically, the Irgun appears to subscribe to the proposals of the Committee, and pending action on the political proposals therein, they are equally convinced there need be no delay in admitting all the homeless Jews into Palestine. They sincerely believe they are following the pattern of other revolutionaries in history and are obviously fanatic in their determination to achieve a Jewish Democracy in Palestine. Every argument of the Committee's representative against the use of violence under the circumstances, irrespective of any possible attitude of the Committee to the contrary, was met with polite but definite firmness. The commander expressed concern that innocent British soldiers should be victims of policy, but emphasized that history was replete with similar tragedy, and added "What about the six million Jews slaughtered in Europe?"

It might be added that not only the Irgun but the other Underground Movements are constituted on quasi-military lines; are apparently armed to greater or lesser degree depending on assignment; and that their discipline seems to be perfect. This point was particularly emphasized at the conference as the result of a remark that Underground tactics too often bred either immediate fascism or subsequent disregard of all law and order, even after ostensible objectives had been achieved.

Whatever else may be said about these Underground or Resistance Movements in Palestine, no one who has visited one of their chiefs or talked with any of them, or for that matter discussed the question with any of the rank and file of the population, can deny their courage and sincerity. Opinions may vary as to whether or not they are misguided patriots, but honest opinion cannot possibly deny that they are patriots.

The author of this report has no doubt whatsoever in his mind that these Resistance Movements in Palestine will never cease in their activities until the Jewish homeland in Palestine has become, through Statehood, an actual fact. And it is more than probable that, should no satisfactory solution to this problem of Statehood be found before the Spring, the three movements will combine in less overt military action.

The Town Schnorrer

By Nathan F. Spielvogel

Old Marks was a disgrace to the congregation! The other members of the Jewish community were decent, respectable law-abiding citizens, giving their working hours to the improvement of their financial position and their leisure hours to the absorbing subject of shule politics and games of nap and sixty-six. They looked down on old Marks and called him The Town Schnorrer. He did not mind! He would say with a twinkle in his bleary eyes: "A fine congregation like this one can support at least one schnorrer!" Parents told their children that, if they saw old Marks in the street, they should cross to the other side as he used very naughty language and was often seen going into those wicked places, the hotels. Solly Bloom, one day, saw him rolling about Main Street and bawling, at the top of his voice, the Shabbas, Ain kaichanu! Yes! Old Marks was a disgrace to the congregation!

A sunny afternoon in Spring time in the year 1880.

Sprawled out under the shade of a huge pine tree, puffing his smelly pipe and watching the people hurrying along on their business errands, lay old Marks. He was the only person in sight who had nothing to do. As he smoked, he mused. The High Holydays were over. He had received his pay for attending Minyan all through the month of Elhul. He had received his pay for acting as second Shammas on Yom Kippur and keeping the children from running about the Shule. He had received his pay for bringing loads of green boughs from the bush to help to make the succahs. Soon he would pay his visits to all members and graciously permit them to do a Mitzvah by giving him some Chanukah Gelt.

He slipped his hand in his pocket and felt his purse. It felt nice and fat. There was enough money there to keep him in food and tobacco for many a day.

And when that was gone?

Why worry?

The widow Harris never grumbled him for the rent of the room he occupied in her house. He raided the woodyards and kept her in firewood. She never had to buy vegetables for he found sufficient in other people's gardens.

Nu! Why should he worry?

But something in the air of that Spring afternoon made him feel uneasy. He was growing old. What waited for him in his old age? He shuddered at the thought.

The Benevolent Home!

"God in Heaven!" he murmured, turning his eyes upward as if hoping to get some consolation from above.

"Oi! Oi!——"

But suddenly he forgot his misgivings.

High up among the branches of the big pine tree, he saw a small black bag. He looked carefully at it. Certainly, it looked like those bags which rich men carried into the big banks.

He must get that bag! But how?

Old Marks lay back and began to think very hard.

Next Shabbas while the chazan was repeating the Musseph, Long Cohen bent over and whispered to Levy if he had heard the news about Schnorrer Marks. He told him that the old scamp was working at the Gasworks. He had seen him going along with a big ladder lighting the street lamps. And he had seen him again at midnight, climbing up his ladder and putting out the lights.

Yes! A miracle had happened. Old Marks was doing some honest work for the first time since he had come to the town.

Levy was so surprised that he said quite loud,

"You make me laugh."

And the Parness banged his desk and said "Sh, Sh", and frowned at Levy.

But it was quite true. Old Marks was working.

A reformed character! Not a bit of it!

For a week, he went round the streets with his long ladder, climbing up and lighting the gas lamps and then at midnight he went around again and put them out.

Then, one very dark night when all the lamps were out and the whole town was asleep, he used his long ladder to get that bag out of the big pine tree. He was pleased to find that it was heavy. He carried it into his bedroom but found it was locked. He tried to force the lock but he failed.

He decided to leave it until morning and then borrow some keys to open the mysterious bag. But in the morning he thought that people would be suspicious when he tried to borrow keys. He thought of a better plan.

He knew where the man at the woodyard hid his axe when he finished his day's work. He would go to the woodyard in the evening and borrow the axe.

Yes! That was a good scheme!

As he went to his room later, with the axe, he saw, through the open door, the white tablecloth, the shobbos candles, the widow Harris, and Abie, her only son, a lad of about twelve years of age gaily singing, "Lecho dodi!"

Old Marks frowned and hustled into his room, closing the door tightly. He dragged the bag from its hiding place and began to use the axe. With one bold stroke, he ripped out one side of the bag.

Out streamed on to his bed, a glittering, chinking heap of golden sovereigns. His eyes nearly popped out of his head. Was there so much gold in the world? Then he spied a piece of paper among the coins. He picked it up and read:

"Tonight I am going to throw myself down one of the abandoned mines. I do not want to live any longer. The woman I married has made my life a Hell and I can stand it no longer. But she shall not have my money. I am throwing it up in this tree and whoever finds the bag may keep it."

That was all. No name! No date!

Who was the writer and how long had that bag been in the tree?

Old Marks chuckled and grinned and hummed as his hands played with the harp of golden coins.

"Then—then—that Abie, that! He with his pimpelpet jacket! A fine shiny top hat! A big gold watch and chain! Cigars and whisky! I'll show them! With all this money I'll be able to go Home . . ."

What was that noise! Was somebody outside the door? Was the widow Harris spying on him?

He threw open the door quickly but there was no one there.

He heard someone crying. He tip-toed along the passage and looked into the room. Abie was standing beside his mother, with his arm around her neck.

"Don't cry, Muma! I'll soon be old enough to get a job."

"Yes! But the landlord will not wait till then for the rent."

And old Marks, at the door, saw tears dropping down her cheeks.

"Don't cry, Muma! I'm sure—sure—God will send you something good one of these days."

A smile came through the tears as she kissed her son, "I thank Him that I have you."

Old Marks stole back to his room and sat down on his bed. He frowned and tugged away at his beard as if he was worrying about something. He picked up a handful of the sovereigns and then flung them down again. He gathered them up into neat piles and laughed softly as he undressed and went to bed.

When Shobbos was out, old Marks went round as usual, collected the fowls, took them to the shochet, brought them back again and received his usual shilling for his services. But while he was away, widow Harris heard a knock at her front door. On opening it she saw there was no one there. But on the step was a small parcel. She took it inside and found it contained a lot of sovereigns and with it was a badly written scrawl.

"God sends Chanukah Gelt to Mrs. Harris."

And old Marks remained old Marks the Schnorrer till he was too old to look after himself. Then he finished his days in the Benevolent Home.

And he seemed quite happy there.

But till he died he was a disgrace to the congregation.

This story is from the Jewish Herald of Melbourne, Australia.

Escorted Little Ones In Escape

To bring children who have managed to survive life in concentration camps back to a normal way of living one must, first of all, love them, according to Gaby Ernestine Wulff, who has been helping to care for such youngsters in France ever since liberation.

One must also be willing to give up his private life, family and any interests that are not also the interests of the children, she declared in New York, recalling her experiences with boys and girls who had to be taught again to smile.

Miss Wolff, who is 23 years old, arrived in the U. S. to take up a scholarship provided by the National Council of Jewish Women. For the next year or so she will study at the School of Social Work of the University of California. She will specialize in child welfare, and then she will return to France to aid in the social reconstruction of her country.

In an interview at Council headquarters, 1819 Broadway, Miss Wolff spoke of "my children", of whom, she said, there were hundreds, some of them almost as old as she. These children are divided into two distinct groups. There are the ones she helped escape from the Nazis, escorting them in groups to the Swiss border, or taking them secretly, one by one, to Christian homes. And there are the others, who returned from deportation. [illegible] going back to these children [illegible] she completes her medical.

"People say children forget. They don't," she declared. "Perhaps they don't speak of what they have seen and gone through, but inside they live it. Even now, after two years, they are not yet normal."

Eight and 9-year-old boys act like men, she declared. If you offer them a toy they look at you with surprise, and they say: "What do you think I am? Give this to a child."

Miss Wolfe is an employee of a child welfare organization known as the O. S. E. Before the war, O. S. E. maintained orphanages for Jewish children, and of necessity, during the occupation went underground. Until the liberation of France its chief occupation was to find safe homes for its charges, many of whom were boarded in Christian homes.

As she escorted the youngsters to places of comparative safety, Miss Wolff would teach them new names and family histories. Once, she said, when she was taking a large group by train to the Swiss border, she had trouble with a little girl who refused to be called Francoise instead of Frieda.

The recalcitrant Francoise climbed into the lap of a strange man who asked her name, and the little girl turned to Miss Wolff, asking:

"Well, am I Frieda or Francoise?"

Just before the invasion Miss Wolff was sent to Southern France to find thirty-five youngsters whose records had been lost. All O. S. E. knew about them were their first names and the towns in which they were being boarded. Miss Wolff managed to locate twenty-five of them. It was like a detective story, she said.

400 QUIT PALESTINE, RETURN TO HOMES

Despite reported hardships and the lack of food in Central Europe, 400 persons, mostly Jews, left Palestine on February 25 to return to their homelands. The majority of them are said to be Czechs.

They assembled at the Lydda airport and were flown by the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration to some Egyptian port, probably Alexandria. There, ships were to transport them to their native countries.

There has been considerable secrecy about the entire operation and UNRRA officials in Palestine would not discuss the matter.

The secrecy may be based on security measures because underground organizations frown upon any reduction in the Jewish population in the country.

In some quarters it was believed that these persons are leaving because of the tense atmosphere in Palestine. But it was pointed out that applications to leave require many months' consideration and that most applicants had made up their minds long ago.

Commentaries

By Dr. Harry J. Stern, Rabbi

Imprudent Journalism

We wish to draw attention to the following editorial of 'The Canadian Register" (Province of Quebec edition) of March 1, and also to a letter which appeared in the same paper on March 8. Suffice it to say that we more than appreciate the sentiments and attitudes expressed below by both Catholic editor and correspondent:

"There are some people and some ideas which prosper on publicity. Many of us had hoped that Mr. Adrien Arcand and his frenzied and vicious anti-Semitism had reached the stage of oblivion where they would remain nothing but a memory of that hatred and prejudice for which the world is still suffering in the aftermath of the war.

"It was therefore with regret that we saw the Gazette bringing out from obscurity the small, smelly residue of a discredited heresy by printing a series of articles permitting Mr. Arcand to repeat his pernicious attacks upon our Jewish fellow-Canadians.

"The motive of the Gazette was to neutralize the evil by exposing it, but unfortunately mental maladjustments such as anti-Semitism thrive on all sorts of publicity even when it is disparaging. It was the attacks of the German anti-Nazi papers which publicized Hitler and helped him into power and it was the opposition of the great London dailies which gave Mosley his Fascist following. Anti-Semitism is a phobia, and to give it publicity is equivalent to unleashing a slavering, mad dog.

"The Gazette would do well to remember that silence is sometimes the most efficacious of weapons."

In the Readers' Forum of the Register the following letter appeared on "The Sin of Anti-Semitism" from A. A. Gardiner:

"Last night I read with great satisfaction your editorial in the March 1 issue of the 'Register', headed 'Imprudent Journalism'. As it said therein, 'Many of us had hoped that Mr. Adrien Arcand and his frenzied and vicious anti-Semitism had reached the stage of oblivion where they would remain nothing but a memory of that hatred and prejudice for which the world is still suffering in the aftermath of the war.' I agreed very thoroughly, too, with the statement that 'Anti-Semitism is a phobia, and to give it publicity is equivalent to unleashing a slavering mad dog.'

"As a Catholic, I felt a very definite and deep sense of satisfaction that such a firm and fair editorial should have appeared in a Catholic paper. Not without interest is that in the 'Gazette' of today, the same date as that in which the editorial appears in the 'Register', the following is quoted from a sermon delivered last evening by Rabbi Harry J. Stern at Temple Emanu-El in Westmount:

" 'Though little Hamans and little Hitlers have arisen again,' he said, 'one thing is sure that these cannot hurdle the fact that Jesus of Nazareth was a Jew, that at this holy season of Lent all Christendom bows in reverence to the humble Rabbi of Galilee who as a true son of Israel taught men to love one another.'

" 'Basically,' he concluded, 'anti-Semitism is not only anti-Christ but anti-Christianity.' "

"Concurrently with my reading and appreciating the editorial, apparently Rabbi Stern was actually dealing with the same subject addressing his people."

Are Native Canadians Less Criminal Than Immigrants?

The press reports that Mr. Godbout, chief of the Liberal party of the Province of Quebec recently made the statement that in our fair city of Montreal "people that were breaking the liquor law and leading young people into vice were not French Canadians but Jews, Italians, Czechoslovakians and other foreigners." This charge against foreigners calls for an examination of statistics regarding crime in Canada. And we wish to point out that Saturday Night, issue of March 15, supplies the data in proof that native Canadians are not less criminal than so-called foreigners.

Thus, according to the last annual report of the Superintendent of Penitentiaries, out of a population of 1,635, the native-born were 1,482; the Europe-born 44; the British-born 63; the Asiatics 3; and the American-born 43 (of whom 12 were of French race and may therefore have been of French Canadian descent). Of the whole number, native and immigrant, 17 were of Hebrew race; 22 Italian; and one Czechoslovakian; and all but six in these three groups were born in Canada.

To quote directly Saturday Night: "Those of French racial origin were 612 and of these all but the 12 American-born already mentioned and one British-born were native Canadians. The proportion of Hebrew to the total is precisely one per cent, and of Italian 1.34 per cent. The Jewish element in the penitentiaries is far smaller in proportion to the total than the Jewish element in the general population, with the Italians it is slightly higher but the Italian penitentiary inmates are not immigrants, they are in far the greater number of cases second generation Canadians."

Statistics indicate that persons of French origin in penitentiaries constitute 37.4 per cent of the total while the persons of French origin in the total population of the country constitute 30.27 per cent, according to the 1941 census.

Crime, like disease, is an affliction plaguing all of the community. We should therefore not permit ourselves the luxury of blaming any group, and give the impression that one race is addicted toward criminality more than any other.

Much of crime is to be traced to a lack of education. Much of it too rises from the struggle with poverty. Let us therefore seek the causes which make for criminality and let us work together as citizens of one community in brotherly labors to lift the unfortunate, of whatever grouping, to high standards of moral, decent living. But let us not claim self-righteous for any race or creed. Our concern should be to eliminate and purify all the elements that truly live by iniquity [illegible]

WILL NOT WORK WITH FASCIST OR COMMUNIST GROUPS

The Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith announced that it had refused to recognize the Social Service Employees Union, Local 19, of the United Office and Professional Workers, CIO, as bargaining representative for its clerical employees because the union had "the well-known reputation of having a Communist-dominated leadership."

In a statement signed by Jacob Alson, chairman of its committee on personnel, and Benjamin R. Epstein, assistant national director, the league said it was "ready and anxious to engage in collective bargaining with any non-political organization of our staff," but that it would refuse to associate with "any Fascist, pro-Fascist, Communist or Communist-dominated organization." The league maintained that such organizations were "not only inimical to the democratic concept but plan its ultimate destruction."

The union, in a reply signed by its president, Mrs. Helen Mangold, said its ten years of activity in behalf of social service workers was "the most ample answer to the irresponsible charges of the Anti-Defamation League." Accusing the league of slander, the union said there was not "a shred of evidence" to support the charge that it was not devoted to the democratic philosophy.

"Our union believes in no discrimination, evidently with somewhat greater sincerity than the Anti-Defamation League," Mrs. Mangold asserted. "It, therefore, permits in its membership and leadership people of all political opinions who are judged solely on their merits and their contribution to the program approved by the membership."

Although Mr. Alson and Mr. Epstein contended that the league, as a non-profit educational agency, was not covered by any Federal or State labor legislation, Mrs. Mangold said it was subject to the Wagner Labor Relations Act and that the union would file unfair labor charges against against it.

Surviving Jews in Germany should receive peace-treaty protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms and the express right to preserve religious and cultural heritage.

Displaced persons in Germany should not be subject to German courts and administrative agencies.

Germany should be made to surrender heirless Jewish property to an appropriate Jewish agency for Jewish reconstruction.

Freedom of emigration for German Jews and their right to take property with them should be recognized; property of German Jews should be exempt from reparations seizures or levies, and Germany should pay reparations in kind to an authorized Jewish agency "in token" of responsibility for the massacre of millions of Jews and other crimes against the Jewish people.

1947 – THE YEAR OF CHALLENGE
The Montreal United Palestine Appeal
FOR $475,000 WILL HELP SOLVE JEWISH HOMELESSNESS ON EUROPEAN CONTINENT

At Haifa Harbour, last lap of their journey, Jewish immigrants cross from the past into the future, bringing their few belongings and a firm resolve to rebuild their lives. The U.P.A. provides the funds for their rehabilitation.

In shadow of Mount Tabor, on lower Galilee plain, Jewish Brigade Veterans break ground for Kfar Kisch, named for their commander, Gen. F. H. Kisch, chief engineer of British 8th Army, killed in Africa. This settlement has been established by the Palestine Foundation Fund and the Jewish National Fund through the funds of the U.P.A.

Give Generously To The U. P. A.

Through the Keren Hayesod (Palestine Foundation Fund) and the Keren Kayemeth (Jewish National Fund), you will provide the funds for new settlements to be added to the 250 colonies already created by these funds. The new settlements will absorb the refugees arriving even now in Palestine. Last year more than 26,000 of Europe's Jews arrived in Palestine under the country's immigration quotas.

Through the Emergency Youth Aliyah, you will assist in saving and rehabilitating in Eretz Israel thousands of Jewish youngsters who survived the horrors of the war and who will grow up in the Homeland in freedom, dignity and self-respect.

Jewish Palestine is confronted with the urgent need to expedite the immigration of those who still survive in Europe. We know that the overwhelming majority of them want to go to Palestine. The Jewish homeland is ready to welcome them. It is the responsibility of the Jews of Montreal to provide their share of the increased resources needed to speed the adjustment of these newcomers and to ensure their absorption into the structure of the Jewish National Home.

This is the challenge which places before the Jews of this community a solemn and historic responsibility.
